CHOOSE DARK SILK FOR DEPENDENCE

When the top coat and serge suit have gone the way of the moth balls, what is better for street wear or for semiformal occasions than the becoming gown of dark slik? Here is an attractive model developed in black charmeuse with a rather close fitting corsage of black georgette crepe beaded in steel beads. One of its chief charms is the simple draping at the back. The slender said of crepe, beaded and tasseled in steel renders this an unusually effective frock.

320 More Jackets to Be Made by Red Cross

Last Saturday the Red Cross workers started to make pneumonia jack-ets. The attendance was very slight, but still there were twenty-eight workers, and twenty-eight jackets were finished. This does not mean that it takes a whole morning for one woman to make one jacket, not at all. The preparation of the cotton, cutting of gauze, cutting of bindings, cutting out of the Jacket according to the pattern, time taken to learn to make the day's work.

Monday 115 workers made 112 jackets. Tuesday, a banner day, 144 workers made 140 jackets. At this rate, they will make the 600 before closing hour at 1 o'clock on Saturday. If this order is to be finished, one jacket has to be made every four and a quarter minutes. Three hundred and twenty jackets must yet be made Tuesday Mrs. C. M. Hurt made nine whole jackets. That means eighteen pieces, fronts and backs. Mrs. J. E. Jahnke made a faultless jacket, and made it in as good time as is humanly possible

Mrs. George Hall made four jackets in three hours. A great many new workers were present. A pretty little woman, who made her jacket well, said to the instructor allotted to teach her that she would have come before, but was afraid the work would be too hard and the criticism too severe. "Why, I can do this work," she said, "and I can come every morning. Tomorrow I will bring two of my friends. We want to help, and we are willing, but we didn't know how strict you were, and we were scared."

The teacher mentioned took the point and volunteered the following

"Don't be scared, Red Cross work ers, or, if you are, grit your teeth and go right in, just as your boys 'over there' may be scared, but they will never falter. This is your fight, your war, right here at home. It is your opportunity, your privilege to serve the country which guards you and fights for you. These are your trenches. The Red Cross is your front line; make it unbreakable."

ONLY THREE MORE DAYS OF BOOK CAMPAIGN

Great Demand Among Soldiers for Good Books at the Service Library.

There are three days left of the "War Service Library" week, and Miss Margaret Dunlap, of the Chattanoora public library, who has been instrumental in getting the library established at the fort, makes a most earnest appeal to the public to contribute good books, for the soldiers. "Just any old thing" is not wanted, but the people are requested to make a sacrifice of some good book, which they have enjoyed and whose senti-ment, like the scent of the roses, "cling 'round them still," and let it go as a companion to those boys who are leaving home and friends.

Books are about the only companions that can take the place of friends. and Miss Dunlap declares that if people could see how eagerly the soldier boys take to them, and realize that the circulation is as large as that in the Chattanooga public librarytion daily—they would respond readily in parting with some sood book from their library shelves. A record of the books that are in demand by the sol-diers has been kept at several of the cantonments, and the indication is for nodern languages, astronomy, engi neering, geography, electricity, strat-egy, physics and above all the great-est demands in poetry is for Kipling rer to Be Given to

WOMAN'S CLUB JOINS COUNCIL OF DEFENSE

Mrs. S. D. Cole Leads Literary Program With Paper on Parliamentary Law.

Mrs. S. D. Cole, parliamentarian, was heard in an instructive paper on Fuesday afternoon at a meeting of the Chattaneoga Woman's club. The literary section of the program was under the auspices of the parliamentary department, of which Mrs. Charles Loftin is chairman. Mrs. Loftin introduced Mrs. Cole, who chose for her subject "Parliamentary Law," the vital point of all deliberative as-semblies, and "Committee Work and What It Embodies." The paper was full of interest, not only by virtue of its instruction, but also from the careful work done in the club by Mrs. Cole, who was for many years director of the parliamentary department. Mrs. J. T. Jones, soprano, gave Kipling's "Recessional" as the musical contribution. Mrs. D. A. Graves, di-rector of the music department, accompanied Mrs. Jones.
